

Dear Member,

We are pleased to share with you the latest edition of the iKNOW Politics Newsletter! In this issue, we invite you to check out our most recent interviews with women in politics and learn about the latest trending stories from around the world as you browse through our news section and online library. You will also discover our partner organizations' recent stories and publications. We encourage you to send us suggestions and ideas on how to improve our services and share your stories with us by sending an e-mail to connect@iknowpolitics.org.

Thank you,
The iKNOW Politics Team

In the Spotlight

iKNOW Politics turned 10 this year!

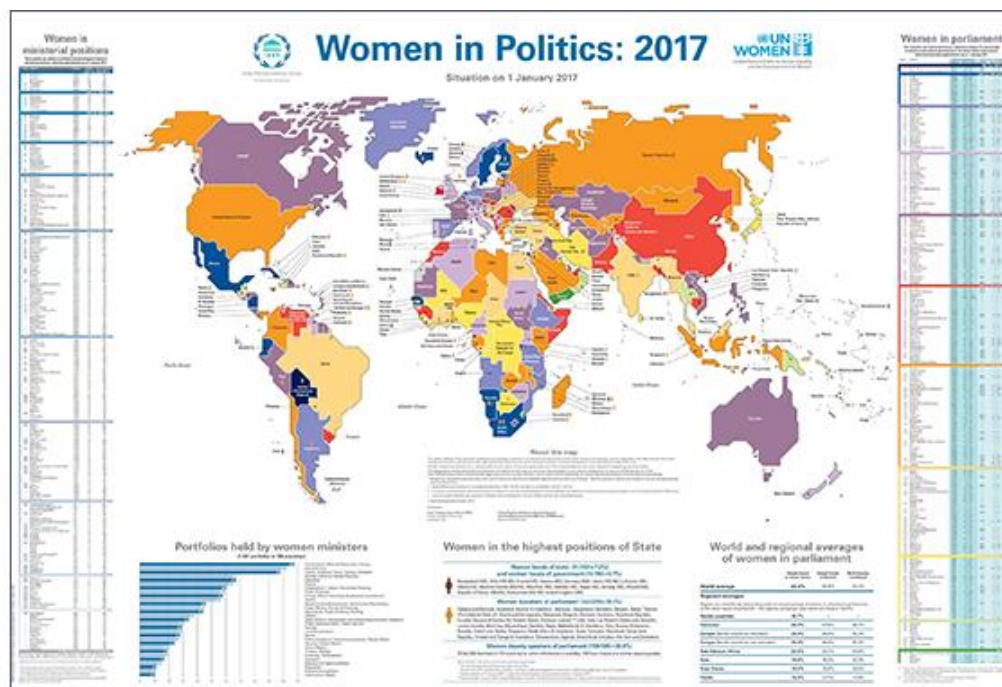

Established in 2007, iKNOW Politics seeks to facilitate women's access to knowledge resources and capacity building materials, as well as provide an online space to share experiences, network and collaborate on issues of interest. In its ten years, iKNOW Politics has been visited more than 1,200,000 times by more than 960,000 users and maintains a network of more than 12,000 members. The platform – available in Arabic, English, French, and Spanish -- acts as a centralized hub of information, providing an opportunity for users to stay abreast of global events and news related to women's political participation globally and regionally. To commemorate the 10th Anniversary of iKNOW Politics, founding partners, including UN Women, UNDP, IPU, and International IDEA, gathered at a side event during the sixty-first session of the Commission on the Status of Women (CSW). The event focused the achievements and best practices that it has experienced in its primary areas of expertise: advocacy & lobbying, elections, parliaments & representatives, political parties and women's leadership. Women in politics in numbers

According to the data contained in the Women in Politics 2017 Map launched in March by the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU) and UN Women, the number of women in executive government and in parliament worldwide has stagnated, with only marginal improvements since 2015:

- The data shows a slight drop in the number of countries with a woman Head of State and/or Head of Government from 2015 figures (from 19 to 17). However, the map reveals a significant increase in the number of countries with a woman Head of State and/or Head of Government since the IPU-UN Women Map's first edition in 2005 (from 8 to 17).
- Progress in the number of women Members of Parliament worldwide continues to be slow. The data shows that the global average of women in national parliaments increased just slightly from 22.6 per cent in 2015 to 23.3 per cent in 2016. Women Speakers of Parliament have however significantly increased in number, now at an all-time high of 19.1 per cent. - In Gambia, a new female speaker of parliament was sworn into office on 11 April 2017. Mariama Diack Denton, a lawyer assumed the top legislative post after elections were held to elect new Members of Parliament. Read more here.

- An opposition party in Algeria unveiled a parliamentary electoral list composed entirely of women. While it is illegal to form a party list that excludes women, the party leader explained "there is no law against the establishment of an all-female list." Read more here.
- Before the 14 May local election, the Election Commission of Nepal urged the political parties to ensure women's candidacy in all posts contesting. Nepal's Constitution ensures 40 per cent representation of women in local level elections. Read more here.
- Obsession with female politicians' appearance in the media is putting young women off going into politics, a study has revealed, prompting campaigners to call for an end to sexism in political media coverage. Read more here.
- Sexist comments and insults have become too common for people trying to serve their community, says Unison, the public services union in Cymru/Wales with predominately female members. The union warns that abuse targeted at politicians on social media is putting some women off standing for public office, particularly women with children. Read more here.

Highlights from our latest e-Discussions

Youth Political Participation

From 3 April to 8 May 2017, iKNOW Politics hosted an e-Discussion in collaboration with UNDP4YOUTH on Youth Political Participation. Fifteen participants from Sub-Saharan Africa, the Arab region, the Americas, and Europe engaged in the online debate and expressed the urgent need for action to give young people the opportunity and power to influence policies that affect their lives by introducing measures aimed at increasing their interest and participation in politics. Women's Political Participation and the SDG's

From 9 January to 12 February 2017, iKNOW Politics hosted an e-Discussion on women's political participation and the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), entitled Women's political participation: a fundamental prerequisite for gender equality, democracy and achieving the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. Fourteen participants from Latin America, the Arab region, and Sub-Saharan Africa engaged in the dialogue and stressed the importance of engaging civil society to ensure quality monitoring of the SDGs, in particular SDG 5 (Achieve gender equality and empower all women and girls). The contributors agreed on the necessity of strong Government commitments, both political and budgetary, to ensure delivery of the Agenda. Some participants noted these commitments come in the form of state agencies, while there are also examples of national or regional action plans and frameworks. Join the forthcoming e-Discussion on Male Champions of Women’s Political Participation

Recognizing the role that men can play in promoting women’s political participation and empowering women leaders, iKNOW Politics will dedicate the next e-Discussion September/October to the role of male champions in advancing women’s political engagement and leadership. Stay tuned for more information on how to join this discussion!

iKNOW Politics in the Community

In May, iKNOW Politics presented at the Women’s Political Leadership International Conference, organized by Rutgers University and the Eagleton Institute. This annual conference explores the nature, origins and manifestations of resistance to women’s political leadership and seeks to stimulate dialogue between academics and practitioners working in specific countries, as well as at the global level, on how to overcome these obstacles to enhance women’s political leadership.
